

SAYS NATION NEEDS DEPENDABLE MEN

John Barrett Cites Country's Crisis in Address to High School Graduates.

"You are graduating at an hour of extraordinary crisis in the history of America. What happens during the next year may determine forever the position of the United States among the nations of the world. She is to become either a leader or a laggard. She is to be loved or hated. She is to be honored or discredited. Everything, therefore, depends upon the attitude of the American government and people in facing the problems before them."

Such was the declaration of John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union, in addressing the graduating class of Eastern High School at commencement exercises held at the National Theater yesterday afternoon.

"All this means that we must have a dependable America. And such an America in turn demands dependable Americans. By this I mean that every citizen must be dependable in the family, in the nation, in the world, in the face of the problems before them."

Not only does the President of the United States want dependable Americans in every government position, at home and abroad, upon the southern border and here in the National Capital, but every employer of men, whether he be a head of a government department or bureau, a president of a bank, the head of a great manufacturing company or any kind of a business establishment, wants men and boys who are dependable, who are always on the job, who speak who are faithful, loyal, honest and never shirking.

TEACHERS' PENSIONS SUBJECT OF REPORT

Growth of Movement Discussed by Official of the Foundation.

Growth of the movement for pensions for teachers in public schools is discussed in the tenth annual report of the president and treasurer of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, just issued. The report points out that twelve states, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, Pennsylvania, and Washington, have considered the establishment of state pensions for public school teachers since the previous report of the foundation. In eight of the states named pension systems were established, the proposition failing in Connecticut, Iowa, Pennsylvania and Washington.

Extract From Report.
The report says, in part: "The development of pensions for public school teachers goes on apace. State after state is beginning to recognize that it cannot lag behind its neighbor if it is to retain its teachers. The realization is spreading rapidly that teachers are underpaid, that the demands upon the little that they have are great, that for their present peace of mind some provision must be made to assist them in the future, that a pension system tends to secure stability in a profession, and so on. And in addition to the many sound and generally accepted arguments for pensions there are also injected tragic and pathetic appeals to save the old teacher from the poverty, and, as in the folder issued by the Michigan campaign, help her to live in comfort and retirement on $300 a year. It is interesting to notice how the campaign has changed during the past year that the press has, on the whole, been favorably inclined with the arguments of the teachers. Here and there opposition found some voice; in general the objection in such cases was that the teachers cannot save for old age out of their present salaries it would be preferable to raise the salaries rather than to legislate special benefits for a favored class. The success of all but two of the agitators for teachers' pensions, however, indicates that the position was not taken very seriously."

THINKS THEY ARE USEFUL.

Mr. Brownlow Commends Flytraps of the St. Louis Type.
"I believe it would be a good thing for some sections of the city," said Commissioner Louis Brownlow when asked his opinion as to whether or not Washington should have municipal flytraps, such as are in use in St. Louis. Mr. Brownlow, who has just returned to Washington from attending the democratic national convention at St. Louis as a delegate, said he did not see any of the traps while he was in the Missouri city, but he thought such as are in use there, could advantageously be used here.

Whiskers

I often cry, "Oh, goodness gracious! My whiskers, tank, apocynaceous, grow faster every year; it takes so much of toil and trouble, to mow away the dog-gone stubble—I still must shear and shear." I'm shaving, with the lather foaming, at early morn and in the gloaming, and by the mid-night lamp; I'm shaving when I should be earning some coin to keep the fires a-burning, till I have barber's cramp. The time men waste, their whiskers mowing, if it were spent in useful sowing, would renovate the earth; why, ask the Innocent Bystanders, do faces run to oleanders, which have no price or worth? It must be great to be a woman, upon whose face, so fair and blooming, alfalfa doesn't grow; she doesn't, with her sisters, gather, at barbershops, the taste of lather she doesn't ever know. But man must always be a-stopping; to mow away the new-out-cropping, his tools must have an edge; and if his whiskers are neglected, his friends will cry, till he's dejected, "Come from behind the hedge!" NOT CHANGED BY BLUE LAW.

Colonial Beach Sunday Customs Remain as Heretofore.

Whatever may have been the effect of the blue law enforcement in Virginia Sunday last, Colonial Beach excursionists who were at the resort that day say they saw no change in the conduct of affairs there. While everything was quiet, the law officers of the town did not interfere with the legitimate pleasures of the visitors, who went in bathing, took a sail on the river and otherwise enjoyed themselves as they had been accustomed to do.

It is stated the officials at Colonial Beach take the position that what is meant by the outer law is not clearly defined and that before taking any steps that might interfere with the pleasure of the summer visitors to the resort they will await decisions of the state courts on the subject. For the past year or longer the regulation regarding the closing Sundays of stores selling groceries, provisions and other articles of commerce has been effective at Colonial Beach and these laws are being strictly enforced.
